reasons). But as radically human leaders, it begins with our hearts. Love and leadership aren't normally put together in the same sentence (for obvious not getting one—or not getting one from someone they liked.
And every Valentine's Day, there were those little cards. Every sixth grader knew the fear of picked for the team, to be popular.
The same desires that used to rule the playground: we want to be liked, to be accepted, to be
We never really get out of the sixth grade. Think about it—we're all still motivated by the

...